Web 3 Revolution

Blockchain came into existence as a medium to disrupt the control of centralized parties in the transaction of values. It is essentially the network to enable an exchange of values from peer-to-peer directly without intermediaries. Blockchain can be used for documentation, tracking of tangible & digital goods and many other applications because it's transparent, democratic, decentralized, efficient and secure. It is a technology that performs peer to peer transfer over the internet.

Digital Marketing is an important phase in the life-cycle of any product, so we ensure that it is done just the right way. Customizing websites for the search engine to rank the product higher in its index is the basic formula. Apart from this, we encourage off-website marketing to increase activities on your app/website.

APPROACH

Requirements

---

The first step is to understand the need of new system and/or comprehend the existing system to suggest variations. We undertake a detailed study of your problems to know where the system lacks. This process involves collecting significant data and raw information which becomes the basis of our analysis. The strategy is to acknowledge every bit of your requirements based on the gathered data and come up with suggestions for refinement and evolving systems with widened functionality. Our strategic workflow has helped us become one of the top service providers in Malaysia.

APPROACH

Design

---

With successful initial analysis, the process is now put to designing to be shaped into a physical system. The theoretical researches of the system's specifications are examined to conclude the various designing aspects. This will include the computing programming language and the IDE to be used. Hardware configuration, control processes, the way of data organization, information flow through the system and the layout are also decided at this stage. The onset of the design phase involves framing the primary structure of the system along with fundamental facets of system protocols and guidelines.

APPROACH

Build

---

The next stage in the life cycle of this revolution is implementing the formulated design with techniques that best suit the development policy. Coding is an important part of this phase and our experienced programmers have to ability to perform this task amazingly well. Our programmers will formulate and structure modules, procedures along with functions that fulfill the purpose of the system. Building efficient algorithms and effective assembly of code dictates the measure of our outstanding performance. The objective is to write error-free and flexible code that can entertain future enhancements. With the best technical team, we guarantee services par excellence and at affordable servicing cost.

APPROACH

Test

---

The certainty of the system is thoroughly checked before it is launched or deployed. It becomes imperative to demonstrate that the constraints of the program are constantly credible irrespective of the situational or contextual variances. For this, the system is checked for its performance in various circumstances with multiple data inputs. After a successful test run, the user is allowed an attempt to mold the inputs as per their requirements and then approve the system upon satisfaction.

APPROACH

Release

---

This phase is where we actually put up the product in the market for users to take advantage of it. After surviving through all the phases of the software development the raw system becomes a full-fledged product. This is now exposed to users to gather their inputs, process and synchronize it with constraints to produce the expected output. The previously documented manuals and user guide of the system are made public. The product is live now serves users and collects valuable feedback for future amendments.

APPROACH

Maintenance

---

To be able to look after what is built is an important virtue of any production. Maintenance thus becomes considerably crucial. After deploying the product, a periodic check on its working life is the next task. The product feedbacks are keenly analyzed to enhance it to address new difficulties faced by the user. One can never achieve an ideal product because changes are natural and absolute. A team dedicated to discovering yet newer versions of the existing product is always on work.
